

Shawn & Madison Roberts

Shawn & Madison are the same character, altered depending on the player's decision of what gender to play as. As such, their biographies are similar. Any differences are highlighted with either blue for Shawn or pink for Madison.

---

For as long as Shawn can remember, he's felt slightly off. Never knew how to dress, never knew how to act, and always felt like an impersonator. To the outside observer, he seems like a normal preteen boy: he watches sitcoms, prefers fast food to vegetables, and seems gifted in school. His mum often chatters about how he solved a Rubik's cube at 5, a skill he's forgotten.

But to Shawn, it's all a façade. He wears graphics tees depicting his favourite video games or bands because that's what his classmates wear, and whenever he is around those he would call his "friends", he has an unnerving feeling of being an imposter and a liar.

Shawn feels like a cheat at home too. His family, especially his mum, believe him to still be this gifted child of his past. But in truth, he feels distracted during the days, unnerved by his own discomfort, and his performance in school has taken a hit because of it.

To make it worse, he's noticing himself changing... His shoulders are too large. He feels too tall. His voice sounds guttural. He hates what is happening to him, and yet no one seems to notice.

---

For as long as Madison can remember, she's felt slightly off. Never knew how to dress, never knew how to act, and always felt like an impersonator. To the outside observer, she seems like a normal preteen girl: she watches sitcoms, prefers fast food to vegetables, and seems gifted in school. Her mum often chatters about how she solved a Rubik's cube at 5, a skill she's forgotten.

But to Madison, it's all a façade. She wears the latest fashion from teenage magazines because that's what her classmates wear, and whenever she is around those she would call her "friends", she has an unnerving feeling of being an imposter and a liar.

Madison feels like a cheat at home too. Her family, especially her mum, believe her to still be this gifted child of her past. But in truth, she feels distracted during the days, unnerved by her own discomfort, and her performance in school has taken a hit because of it.

To make it worse, she's noticing herself changing... Her body is bulging. Her legs and hips feel too large. Her voice sounds too shrill. She hates what is happening to her, and yet no one seems to notice.

Shawn

Madison